Course Description

Supervisors lament over the lack of professionalism demonstrated by even some of our best students. The reality is that there are some elements of professionalism we may just mistakenly assume interns, CFs, and new professionals know, that no one has ever taught them. In this session specific strategies for developing professional skills in their students will be discussed.

Instructional Level: Intermediate

Learner Outcomes

At the end of this presentation, attendees will be able to:

1. Name the skills that are expected of entry level professionals in our field.
2. Describe strategies to teach professional skills to entry level professionals.
3. Learners will describe strategies to teach professional skills to entry level professionals.

About the Speakers: Dr. Clemons is an assistant professor in the department of communication sciences and disorders at Biola University. Her research interests include simulation-based medical education in the field of communication disorders, TBI and post- concussion therapy, and dysphagia.

Tonya Dantuma, associate professor of communication disorders, was a key leader in bringing Biola University's new master's degree in speech-language pathology to fruition. Biola's program is an answer to the nation's growing need for speech-language pathologists, which is currently experiencing a national shortage due to the lack of credentialed personnel.
